This building stood on the southeast corner of Main and Washington Streets, it was known as the old Bell Tavern. It had a quaint sign board bearing the impression of a bell with the inscription -"I'll toll you in if you have need, supply your wants and bid you speed." The history of this building is full of revolutionary incidents. It was the official meeting place of the soldiers of 1775. A watch, also, of thirteen men, was stationed here every night. When Col. Pickering marched at the head of his battalion of minute men, en route for Bunker Hill, he halted at the tavern for a few minutes. This ancient tavern

Business.

Salem Evening News.

General condition of business was dull throughout the year 1914. In Dec. it was at its lowest ebb. War in Europe had a bad effect on the leather industry in town, that of calfskins and sheepskins in particular. Hundreds of men were idle and the shops reduced help daily.

Benjamin Beckett, jr., the carpenter, tore down the old Buxton House, so called, on the corner of Endicott and Andover Sts. It was about 100 years old in 1880. In 1797 it was occupied by one John Poor, a familiar name in Peabody. On inquiry, it was said none of his descendants lived in this vicinity. Next to him, Rev. Mr. Mead (who was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Walker) occupied it for a few years, who, if stories be true, ^{he} was quite an eccentric divine, so much so that his stay was short. It was related of him that he built a stone wall around the house before breakfast and that while he was eating his frugal meal, the wall tumbled down before he was through. He came from Woburn. After Rev. Mr. Mead vacated it, a Mr. Whitney, a drover, occupied it.
